

Analysis of single molecule movements (single-molecule fluorescence resonance energy transfer - FRET) represents a major breakthrough in bionanotechnology. Optimal analysis needs both data and models to interpret the data. The present project investigates a specific data sets using HMM (Hidden Markov Models) where the HMM represents a discrete approximation to a more complex reality.