

The identification of groups of molecules that can catalyze themselves could have been an important stepping stone in the origin of life. Modelling the appropriate graphical structure probabilistically and finding such sets in the graphical structure poses several interesting problems. This project will pursue faster algorithms and a specific model based on polymer concatenation.