

RNA secondary structure can be predicted through free energy minimisation or base pair maximisation. Both these criteria lead to optimisation problems that can be solved through the technique of dynamical programming. The project will teach basic programming skills and the ability to design and implement basic algorithms.